

International Property Outlook – Summary 2025

Global macro environment & headwinds

-  The global real-estate sector remains under pressure from higher interest rates.
-  Geopolitical uncertainty and economic slowdowns keep investors cautious.
-  Markets show signs of stabilisation but returns remain modest.

Where the momentum is: Sectors & property types to watch

-  Residential and living assets remain strong due to stable demand.
-  Logistics and industrial real estate benefit from e-commerce and supply-chain shifts.
-  Data centres and digital infrastructure continue rising in relevance.
-  Prime office assets in tier one locations still attract institutional capital.

Regional outlook

-  Europe: Attractive valuations, stabilisation, and rental growth.
-  Asia-Pacific: Strong demographics and infrastructure demand.
-  US: Still relevant, but capital flows are diversifying internationally.
-  Recovery remains uneven across markets and sectors.

Implications for investors

-  Selectivity matters — focus on high-quality assets with resilient demand.
-  Location and property type will drive returns.
-  Long-term outlook is cautiously optimistic with pockets of strong opportunity.
